SHARAPOVA BANNED FOR TWO YEARS BY ITF

The career of Russian former world number one Maria Sharapova was in tatters on Wednesday after she was given a two-year ban by the International Tennis Federation (ITF) following her positive test for the banned drug meldonium at this year's Australian Open. In a statement the ITF said the 29-year-old five-times grand slam champion's ban would be backdated to Jan. 26 this year, meaning her results and prize money from the Australian Open, where she reached the quarterfinals, would be canceled out. Sharapova said she would appeal to the Court of Arbitration for Sport (CAS), describing the punishment as "unfairly harsh." She said an independent tribunal in London on May 18-19 had found that she had not intentionally violated anti-doping rules. REUTERS

TWO SC AIR NATIONAL GUARD PILOTS SURVIVE MID-AIR CRASH

Two South Carolina Air National Guard fighter pilots ejected safely from their jets after they collided over eastern Georgia while performing routine night operations, the National Guard said on Wednesday. The two F-16 fighter jets collided at about 9:15 p.m. on Tuesday over a military area in Jefferson County, Georgia, and then crashed, the South Carolina Air National Guard said on Facebook. The pilots of each of the single-seat aircraft ejected safely after the mid-air collision, and there were no reports of injuries on the ground, the guard said. The incident comes five days after a Navy Blue Angels flight demonstration squadron pilot was killed when his F/A-18 crashed in Smyrna, Tennessee, and an Air Force Thunderbirds squadron pilot was unhurt when his F-16 jet crashed in Colorado. REUTERS

MORGAN STANLEY PAYS $1M SEC FINE OVER HACKED CUSTOMER DATA

Morgan Stanley agreed to pay a $1 million fine to settle U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission charges that security shortfalls enabled a former employee to transfer data regarding roughly 730,000 accounts to his personal server, which was later hacked. The former employee, financial adviser Galen Marsh, accepted a five-year securities industry ban to settle related civil charges. Marsh was sentenced last December to three years probation after pleading guilty over the data breach. Morgan Stanley did not admit or deny wrongdoing in agreeing to settle with the SEC. REUTERS

Teenage boy dead in shooting at high school in Dorchester

Three other people were injured in the gunfire.

SPENCER BUELL

Boston's top cop is asking for witnesses to "step up" and help investigators after a teenager was killed and three others wounded in a mid-afternoon shooting outside a Dorchester high school on Wednesday.

"We can't let this happen in and around our schools," Boston Police Commissioner William Evans said in an afternoon press conference. "We are appealing to the public to step up, call us and get this thing solved."

One victim, a 17-year-old boy who has not been identified but who Evans said was a student at the Jeremiah E. Burke High School, has died. Two other male students were injured, he said, as was a woman in her 60s. Police responded

"We can't let this happen in and around our schools. We are appealing to the public to step up, call us and get this thing solved."

Evans

to 56 Washington Street, just steps from the school's entrance, around 1:15 p.m.

The search for a suspect, who fled the scene, continued into Wednesday evening.

Evans said it was too early in the investigation to confirm whether a fire alarm had gone off just before the shooting, as some students told media outlets.

He also sought to assuage the fears of witnesses concerned about retaliation if they contact police, saying his department would protect the identities of tipsters.

Those with information can contact police by calling 1-800-494-TIPS or texting the word "TIP" to CRIME (27463).

Mayor Marty Walsh, speaking to reporters, reflected on Wednesday's tragic events, and insisted that overall the "city is safe."

"Unfortunately we still have these incidences of shootings of our young people, and we have too many of them," Walsh said. "A 17-year-old kid shouldn't be dead today."

He also said counselors would be brought into schools to help students shaken up by the violence.

After the shooting, three area schools were briefly in "safe mode": the Dearborn STEM Academy, the Martin Luther King, Jr. K-8 School and the Lilla G. Frederick Pilot Middle School.

Medical marijuana dispensary in Allston 'endorsed' by Council

"Non-opposition" vote unanimous; approval still needed from state and zoning board.

SPENCER BUELL
@MetroBOS
spencer.buell@metro.us

A nonprofit hoping to open a medical marijuana dispensary got an OK from Boston's City Council on Wednesday.

The vote — which was to sign a letter of "non-opposition" — was unanimous.

Mayflower Medicals hopes to open a facility at 230 Harvard Ave., next to a liquor store.

Councilor Mark Ciommo, who represents Allston-Brighton, at the meeting said the location was "ideally suited" for patients and neighbors.

It marks the first dispensary in the city to get the quasi-endorsement from councilors before starting to collect the other necessary OKs from state regulators and the zoning board.

"I think this is a really good thing, that they come to us first before they can even get out of the gate," Councilor Bill Linehan said at the meeting.

Mayflower Medicals is not the only one

Ballot question

Voters in Massachusetts will get to weigh in on a ballot question this November that would legalize marijuana for recreational use.

vying for a presence in the neighborhood when it comes to medical pot. A company called Compassionate Organics has also been in the running for a piece of Allston real estate, down the street at 114 Harvard Ave.

Each has accused the other of offering plans that break the law banning dispensaries within 500 feet of areas where children congregate. According to the Boston Herald has report, Compassionate Organics is near a martial arts gym, while Mayflower is near the Chabad Center of Brookline.

Compassionate Organics, which lobbied for the chance to get a similar nonopposition vote from the council, did not come up at the meeting.

Last year, the Zoning Board of Appeals lent conditional approval to what would be the city's first medical marijuana dispensary, a facility Patriot Care Corp. hopes to open in downtown Boston on Milk Street.

Police probing if two East Boston park attacks are related

An 83-year-old man attacked over Memorial Day weekend died from a head injury.

Police are investigating whether two recent East Boston park attacks, one of which left a man dead, are related.

Two attacks on visitors to the Belle Isle Marsh Reservation within the past two weeks were being examined by authorities on Wednesday to determine if the crimes were connected, WHDH reported.

Over Memorial Day weekend, an 83-year-old man was attacked and left with a serious head injury, WHDH added. He died three days later.

On June 1, a 67-year-old Lynn man who was walking in the park was assaulted and left with nonlife-threatening injuries, WCVB reported. Because of evidence gathered, authorities were working to determine if that assault was related to the Memorial Day attack.

The June 1 victim was able to give police a description of his attacker, according to WHDH, which added that both attacks happened in the afternoon. There has been an increased police presence at the park since the assaults.

The June 1 attacker was described as a white man in his 20s or 30s who was about 5-foot-9 and wearing a hat, T-shirt and shorts, WCVB added.

Wynn to Mayor Curtatone: "How about we get lunch?"

A casino magnate eager to bring a new resort to the Boston area said he'd be willing to meet with a neighboring mayor who opposes the venture.

Steve Wynn reportedly seemed enthusiastic about the prospect of meeting with Somerville Mayor Joe Curtatone, who opposed efforts to legalize casino gambling in Massachusetts and whose legal challenges to Wynn's project in Everett are delaying the $2 billion facility's construction.

"How about we get lunch?" Wynn said when asked by reporters if he had a message for Curtatone, according to Boston.com.

"How can I not [meet with him]? They're neighbors, and you want to have — if you've got your head screwed on straight — a good, cordial relationship with everybody, especially if it's where your employees live. I think that's a natural, wonderful thing to do."

An appeal of a state decision by Curtatone to give Wynn a license for waterfront construction was heard last week, according to the report.

A decision is expected later this summer, but the project can't start while the appeal is under-way. CHRIS CAESAR

BRIEF

Oklahoma medical examiner rules oilman McClendon's deadly crash an accident

The fiery crash that killed U.S. oilman Aubrey McClendon in March after his car hit a wall was an accident, Oklahoma's medical examiner said on Wednesday, echoing a police inquiry's findings a day earlier that there was no evidence of suicide.

The examiner said he died of "multiple blunt force trauma" and his corpse suffered "charring" and "burns" after his

Chevy Tahoe slammed into a concrete bridge abutment on March 2. The crash happened a day after federal prosecutors indicted him for violating anti-trust laws by rigging bids for oil lands.

McClendon, who failed to show up at a dinner with friends the night of the indictment, denied the charges.

Toxicology tests showed there was no alcohol in his blood at the time of the accident.

Details of the crash, in which his vehicle was driving well above the speed limit at 88 mph, stunned the U.S. energy industry.

Many executives worried McClendon, a leader of the U.S. fracking boom who was ousted in 2013 as CEO of Chesapeake Energy after a shareholder revolt, had committed suicide.

On Tuesday, Oklahoma City police said they found no emails or notes to suggest he was contemplating ending his life, but acknowledged his state of mind at the time of the crash was unknowable.

Pressure builds upon judge over Stanford sex assault case

The uproar over the sentence is part of growing outrage in the United States over sexual assault on college campuses.

Sen. Barbara Boxer on Monday decried a California judge's decision to sentence a college athlete to just six months in jail for sexual assault, and signatures on an online petition calling for the jurist's ouster later passed 400,000.

The sentence last week by Santa Clara County Judge Aaron Persky against former Stanford University swimmer Brock Turner gained international attention after a letter from the athlete's father to the judge that was posted online described the assault as "20 minutes of action."

"Six months for someone who viciously attacked a woman, especially after she was so brave to come forward, is outrageous," Boxer said in a statement.

Last week, the victim in the case read a 12-page letter to the court detailing her feelings in the wake of the assault. It was later read millions of times online. The victim's name has not been released to the public.

In the Stanford case, prosecutors said that witnesses saw Turner, 20, on top of the woman as she lay motionless outside a fraternity party in January 2015. When Turner ran away, two students tackled and held him for police, prosecutors said.

Turner in March was convicted of intent to rape an intoxicated and unconscious person, penetration of an intoxicated person and penetration of an unconscious person. His lawyer said that he was considering appealing the conviction and had filed a notice of intent to appeal with the court.

An online petition at Change.org urging the removal of the judge had collected more than 400,000 clicks of support by Tuesday afternoon, in a largely symbolic gesture.

Stanford law professor Michele Dauber has vowed to start a formal recall effort against Persky, but that is a difficult process rarely used in California.

International interest in the case has led media organizations to request interviews with the woman, but prosecutors said on Tuesday that she wished to remain anonymous.

In a statement released by Santa Clara County Deputy District Attorney Alaleh Kianerci to CNN, the woman said that in addition to wanting to protect her privacy, she could better represent all women if her name and image were not known.

"I'm coming out to you simply as a woman wanting to be heard," she said in the statement to CNN. "For now I am every woman." REUTERS

Islamic State loses ground on fronts in Syria, Iraq

Islamic State's far-flung enemies in Syria and Iraq pressed ahead on Wednesday with major advances on multiple fronts that have put some of the greatest pressure on the ultra-hardline Islamists since they declared their caliphate two years ago.

A spokesman for a U.S.-backed alliance in northern Syria said it was poised to enter the city of Manbij, a week after launching an assault with the aim of cutting off the last stretch of Turkish frontier still under Islamic State control.

A short distance further west, rebels fighting against both Islamic State and the government of President Bashar al-Assad said Islamic State fighters had pulled out of an area near the border.

Assad's forces, backed by Russian airpower, also launched an offensive against Islamic State last week and have advanced in territory further south.

At the opposite end of the self-proclaimed caliphate, 466 miles down the Euphrates River, Iraqi government forces said they had fought their way into built-up areas of Falluja, the second-biggest city in Iraq under Islamic State control and the militants' closest bastion to Baghdad.

The Iraqi government is backed both by U.S. air power and by Shi'ite militia allied to Washington's regional foe Iran.

A five-year civil war in Syria and the weakness of the Iraqi government have made it difficult for world powers and their allies on the ground to coordinate a campaign against the militants.

But the simultaneous attacks on a variety of fronts have created unprecedented pressure on the militants, who have imposed harsh rule over territory with millions of inhabitants while making enemies of all global and regional powers.

The campaign by a U.S.-backed alliance called the Syria Democratic Forces (SDF) is the most ambitious so far waged with support of the U.S. in Syria, where Washington previously lacked effective allies on the ground.

A small contingent of U.S. special forces troops are assisting the SDF, which was formed last year to combine militarily successful Kurdish militia with Arab allies more acceptable to Washington's NATO ally Turkey.

The goal of the offensive, launched last week, is to capture the area around the town of Manbij west of the Euphrates, and seal off the last 50 mile stretch of the Syrian-Turkish border in Islamic State hands.

The frontier has been used by Islamic State as their main supply route, and more recently to send followers back to Europe for attacks like those carried out in Brussels and Paris since last year.

The SDF had advanced to the outskirts of Manbij but had held back from entering to limit harm to civilians, a spokesman for the SDF-allied Manbij Military Council said.

Shafan Darwish said Islamic State fighters had fled the city and had rigged homes with explosives. REUTERS

Clinton and Trump draw battle lines for ill-tempered campaign

All signs point toward a negative campaign between Clinton and Trump for five months.

Presidential candidates Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump kicked off a fierce general election battle, with Democrats accusing Trump of erratic behavior and the Republican threatening to bring up old Clinton scandals.

Clinton, the former secretary of state, made history when she became the first woman to lead a major political party in its quest to capture the U.S. presidency. Big primary election wins on Tuesday in California and elsewhere catapulted her to victory over Democratic opponent Bernie Sanders.

If elected on Nov. 8, the 68-year-old would return the Clinton family to the White House 16 years after her husband, Bill Clinton, completed two terms as president.

The Clinton campaign drew on critical comments from Republicans themselves to portray the 69-year-old Trump as not fit for the Oval Office after the real estate

"The most effective thing to do with Donald Trump is just to get his words out there and let him speak for himself."

Clinton campaign manager Robby Mook told CNN

Hillary Clinton

developer repeatedly accused a Mexican-American judge of showing bias against him because of his ethnic heritage.

Clinton campaign manager Robby Mook charged Trump with a history of "erratic behavior," the same language leveled by the Obama campaign in its defeat of Republican nominee John McCain in 2008.

Trump gave a carefully crafted primary race victory speech on Tuesday night laying out his plan of attack. To keep him from straying off message, he used a Teleprompter and avoided his typical stream-of-consciousness delivery.

Trump said money given to the Clinton Foundation charity from foreign donors has earned the Clintons millions of dollars and had a corrupting influence when Hillary Clinton was secretary of state and used a private email server to conduct official business.

"Hillary Clinton turned the State Department into her private hedge fund — the Russians, the Saudis, the Chinese — all gave money to Bill and Hillary and got favorable treatment in return. It's a sad day in America when foreign governments with deep pockets have more influence in our own country than our great citizens," Trump said.

He said he would give a speech next week "discussing all of the things that have taken place with the Clintons."

A Reuters/Ipsos poll on Tuesday showed Clinton leading Trump by 10 percentage points nationally, little changed from a week earlier.

Both Clinton and Trump have work to do to unite their parties behind them but the Democrat appeared to face the easier path with Sanders, a leftist senator from Vermont, nearly out of options to challenge her.

Trump has an uphill battle, with many party leaders still opposed to him. U.S. House of Representatives Speaker Paul Ryan described Trump's remarks about the judge as a "textbook definition of a racist comment" but said he would still support him.

Ryan met behind closed doors on Wednesday with House Republicans. An aide said Ryan "discussed with his members the thinking behind his endorsement [of Trump] and how to move forward" and reiterated he had confidence Trump would support the House Republican agenda.

Republicans complain that Trump still engages in petty battles with former rivals and is way behind in building a fund-raising organization. Trump is to meet on Thursday in New York with top fund-raisers of the Republican National Committee, a party official said. REUTERS

Bobby Brown opens up on '20/20'

Once successful R&B star Bobby Brown let it all out in an interview with Robin Roberts on "20/20" Tuesday night. He not-so-subtly blamed the untimely death of his 22-year-old daughter Bobbi Kristina on her boyfriend, Nick Gordon ("He knows what happened") and owned up to drug use throughout his 15-year marriage to the late Whitney Houston. He also admitted he struck Houston one time while "trying to maintain sobriety," but says he isn't a "woman beater" because ... ew.

Brown, who is, unsurprisingly, in the process of promoting his tell-all autobiography, "Every Little Step," was forthcoming about Houston's drug habits, claiming, "She did drugs. They didn't do her." He also said the couple would partake in binges, but were always mindful not to do drugs directly in front of their young daughter. Somehow Brown still thinks they "failed" as parents.

The 47-year-old also claimed that Houston cheated on him with Tupac and had a secret lesbian relationship with her assistant, Robyn Crawford. But it's cool: Brown said he hooked up with Madonna and Janet Jackson in the meantime. "I was not trippin'."

Also, for funsies, Brown added that he had sex with a ghost in a mansion he bought in Georgia. "One time, I woke up, and yeah, a ghost. I was being mounted by a ghost."

Life is so exciting when you're Bobby Brown.

Ellen DeGeneres sued over 'Titi' joke

Sticks and stones may break your bones, but words can lead to lawsuits — if you're Ellen DeGeneres, at least.

A Georgia real estate agent named Titi Pierce is filing a defamation lawsuit against Warner Bros. and the comedienne, claiming "invasion of privacy, defamation and emotional distress," according to the Associated Press.

The lawsuit is the result of a segment that aired on DeGeneres' show back in February and again in April. The segment, titled "What's Wrong With These Signs?"

pokes fun at storefronts, ads and signs that fans send into the show. DeGeneres used a sign for Pierce's real estate business to make a joke about breasts, mispronouncing the agent's name as "Titty Pierce" rather than the correct "Tee-tee Pierce."

The lawsuit also alleges that Pierce was subject to "ridiculing and harassing" phone calls after the producers of the show failed to blur out her cellphone number in the segment. No one from the show has commented on the matter.

Rachel Roy supposedly ran away from Beyonce

Is Rachel Roy "Becky with the Good Hair"? Do we know by now? Because honestly, it's been weeks and someone from the FBI forensics lab needs to start returning our calls.

Gathering more evidence in the "yes" column: Roy supposedly bolted from the CFDA Awards earlier this week after she heard Beyonce had arrived. The "Formation" singer attended the event to accept the Fashion Icon Award (kept under lock-and-key until the reveal) but Page Six reports rumors began earlier that evening when Jay Z, Blue Ivy and Tina Knowles arrived to the show. According to their sources, Roy split ASAP: "She just disappeared with her place card and never came back."

Still, pals of Roy's told the pub that she had to catch a flight, and the designer has sworn there's "no validity" to the reference in "Lemonade" and her alleged affair with Jay Z.

At least she got a nice place card out of it.

Richard Simmons is NOT becoming a woman

A rumor began circulating yesterday that fitness guru Richard Simmons was becoming a woman, instigated by a National Enquirer story that claimed he's now a "soft spoken woman named Fiona."

Simmons' rep, Tom Etsey, fired back at the allegations:

"He is not transitioning into a woman. He has decided to live quietly the last few years. He had knee surgery a few years ago and has a bum knee."

Over the weekend, Simmons was hospitalized, which concerned fans of the 67-year-old.

In response, Simmons assured them over Facebook that he was OK and was simply "dehydrated." He further advised: "Summer is here — drink plenty of liquids."

Why being politically correct matters

Geek Girl in Hollywood

Are you tired of being politically correct all the time? I hear this over and over again when I write stories about women in the geek world. One of my writers just posted a fantastic story about the "X-Men: Apocalypse" ad showing Jennifer Lawrence's Mystique being choked by Oscar Isaac's Apocalypse, and how Fox's apology wasn't enough. I've been fielding misogynist comments ever since.

"Oh, the writer must be a stupid blonde chick." Nope. It's a guy. "No one would care if it was Nightcrawler." No, because he's a guy and the statistics for violence against men aren't exactly the same as for women. "Stupid political correctness is turning us all into p—s." Nope. We're just trying to point out the entrenched misogyny that makes the epidemic of violence against women acceptable.

The same day as this, there

Mystique (Jennifer Lawrence) gets a chokehold from Oscar Isaac's Apocalypse in one of the prominent posters for "X-Men: Apocalypse." TWENTIETH CENTURY FOX was a story about a judge who gave a rapist, Brock Turner, a six-month sentence because a longer prison term "would have a severe impact on him." His father thinks even six months is "a steep price to pay for 20 minutes of action." You cannot begin to tell me entrenched sexism isn't a problem.

Between that story and the one where the newest "Ghostbusters" ads didn't feature a single woman from the all-female main cast, I've been dealing with people telling me I'm imagining things — that it's not that bad, that I'm overreacting.

Here's the thing about being politically correct: If all things were equal, a simple scene from the film on a poster might not be a big deal. If we weren't worrying about the rapist instead of the victim, and whether or not he gets to compete in the Olympics instead of the scars this woman will bear for the rest of her life, maybe a movie ad that erases the female leads wouldn't be a big deal. Maybe we wouldn't notice. Maybe if this were a perfect world, talking about this stuff wouldn't matter.

Well, it's not a perfect world yet. And I'm not done talking.

In "The Conjuring 2," Vera Farmiga and Patrick Wilson reprise their roles as Lorraine and Ed Warren, noted paranormal psychologists seen investigating the noted Enfield haunting case of the late '70s. WARNER BROS. PICTURES

Patrick Wilson doesn't do horror

But he will do it if the script is as good as the ones for the "Insidious" or "Conjuring" movies.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Patrick Wilson doesn't want to be a horror actor. And yet he's been in four of the most successful horror films of the last five years. The Tony-nominated actor has appeared in "Insidious" and its first sequel, plus "The Conjuring" and its new follow-up — all four directed by one person: James Wan of "Saw" and "Furious 7."

Wilson isn't likely to do horror for anyone else, especially since "The Conjuring 2" — in which he reprises his role as paranormal investigator Ed Warren, who patrols for potential ghosts along with his wife Lorraine (Vera Farmiga) — allows him to do very un-horror movie things, like regale some frightened children with an Elvis song.

First off, nice Elvis impersonation. [Laughs, adopts Elvis voice] Thank you. Thank you very much.

Was that something that was in the script or did you and James Wan come up with it on the spot?

I've tried that in every movie I've been in, and no director has ever bit. [Laughs] No, that was his idea. When he came on board [for the second one], that was the first scene he wrote. I got this text randomly asking, "Do you play guitar?" I responded, [sounds suspicious] "Yes, why? What do you have in mind?"

Is this some charity benefit you want me to do for you?" I remember thinking, "OK, here we go." That shows you a lot about him. I love the fact that he's constantly trying to push the genre.

His horror movies are like that: They have real meat for the actors.

James knows how to create scares better than anyone. But he also loves character. When you think about the great horror films, there's always something else, whether it's adult drama or it's about parent-child relationships, husbands and wives, family and stress.

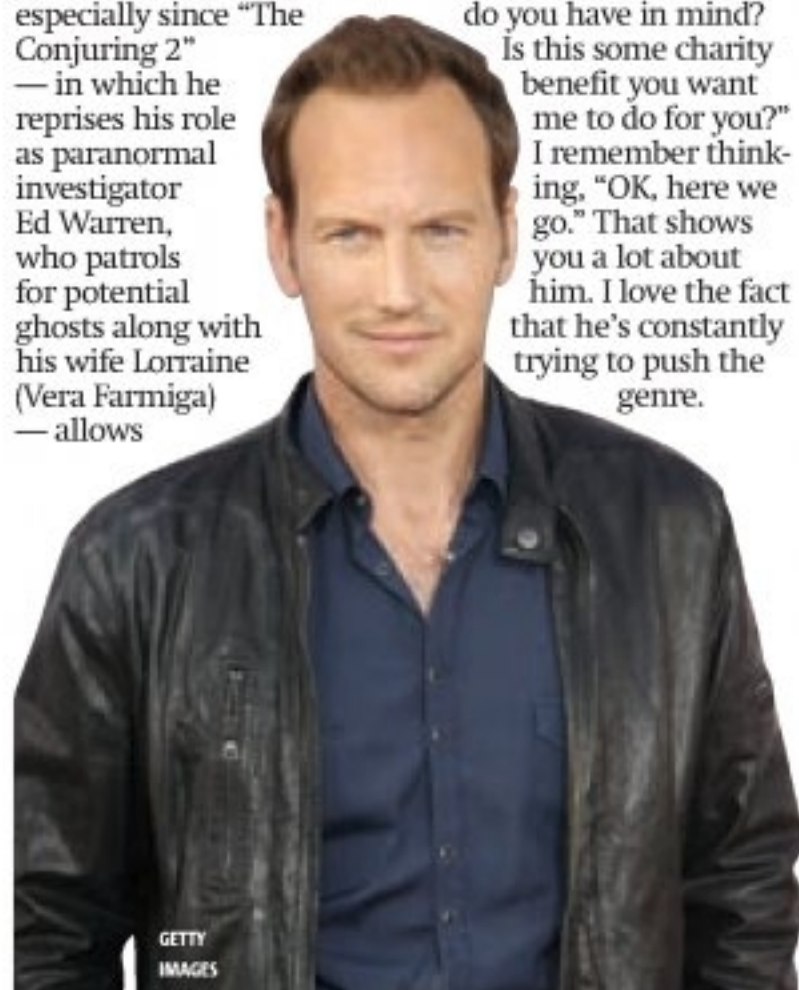

You want to have those character moments. You want to get invested in these relationships. Vera would say the same thing: We love playing these people. They have very human moments, and I think that's why people actually enjoy these films. That's why there's the Elvis scene, the romantic moments Ed and Lorraine have. That's the good stuff.

It is a cool portrait of a couple. You rarely see married people who are that much in love in movies.

That's true. It's nice to play, to have it. Otherwise we'd be bored. [Chuckles]

Since doing these films, do you tend to get a lot of horror scripts?

I would imagine my manager and agents do. I don't, because they know I would just turn them all down. [Laughs] If someone has the guts to say to me, "I have this horror script," it doesn't get past the "h" and I say, "I'm not interested." People will try to do it in different ways: "Well, it's more of a thriller!" Right. Sure it is.

World's most beautiful city parks

Now this is an urban oasis.

Fodor's Travel

In the middle of an urban jungle, sometimes you need to find a moment of peace and quiet. But some parks are major attractions in their own right and offer more than just a place to take a break. From a Canadian wilderness retreat with wooded seaside pathways, to a colorful architectural mecca in one of Europe's most vibrant cities, these destinations give new meaning to the words "urban oasis."

stunning city parks. Spread over almost 100 acres, the gardens feature peaceful lakes and a diverse collection of 50,000 plants. Visitors can get an up-close look at camellias, cacti, roses, cycads and exotic plants from southern China. The gardens are also home to native black swans and bellbirds, and you can scope out cockatoos and kookaburras on guided nature tours. During the warmer months, the gardens transform into a cultural venue with outdoor theater performances and exhibitions.

downtown. The park also features jogging and biking paths and bridges that overlook the water.

Forest Park

St. Louis
It's easy to spend an entire day in Forest Park. Located on the outskirts of downtown St. Louis, the park boasts 1,300 verdant acres and five major cultural institutions, including an art museum, outdoor ice rink and city zoo. Visitors can picnic on green hills or take a paddleboat ride through sparkling blue ponds. For those who prefer a more active itinerary, a dual path provides ample opportunity for running and biking.

Luxembourg Garden

Paris
Footsteps from Paris' bustling Latin Quarter is Luxembourg Gardens, one of the city's most peaceful retreats. The park's colorful flower beds and well-tended pathways are enough to attract visitors, but the sprawling landscape is also home to a number of attractions. In addition to French and English gardens, the park also boasts greenhouses with a breathtaking orchid collection and a blossoming orchard with apple and pear trees. If you have children in tow, consider catching a puppet show at the park's renowned marionette theater or visiting the popular merry-go-round and swings.

Stanley Park

Vancouver
Few places compare to Vancouver's Stanley Park: The 1,000-acre wilderness park is footsteps from downtown and attracts a regular crowd of locals and tourists. Visitors can walk, cycle or Rollerblade along a seawall, or enjoy outdoor theater and cultural performances during the warmer summer months. Don't miss the park's forest trails and lakes. Parkgoers can relax next to Beaver Lake, a peaceful body of water almost completely covered by water lilies, or explore Lost Lagoon, a glittering 41-acre freshwater lake.

Hibiya Park

Tokyo
Located in the heart of Tokyo is Hibiya Park, the city's green oasis. Originally the palace grounds of a feudal lord, the park has since transformed into a bustling cultural center and peaceful urban retreat. Visitors can enjoy musical performances in open-air concert halls or take a stroll through peaceful gardens. The park's flower beds bloom year-round and guests can get an up-close look at delicate cherry blossom trees or colorful rose bushes.

Balboa Park

San Diego
Stepping into Balboa Park feels a little like entering the pages of a storybook. The park's captivating architecture, sparkling fountains and sprawling courtyards enchant visitors and keep locals coming back for more. Explore Florida Canyon's rustic desert landscape or walk eastward to see the park's well-tended rose garden. The California Building, the park's 200-foot tower, features a majestic blue-tiled dome and a 100-carillon bell that tolls the hour.

EMILY WASSERMAN

Villa Doria Pamphili

Rome
As the largest landscaped public park in the city, Villa Doria Pamphili delights visitors with its elaborate architecture and intricate gardens. Originally the estate of a noble family, the expansive grounds feature neatly manicured gardens with clipped hedges and fountains. Wide gravel pathways are perfect for jogging, and antique statues and vases harken back to an earlier era. Don't miss the Arch of the Four Winds, a commemorative monument at the entrance to the park's sprawling grounds.

Ibirapuera Park

São Paulo
Often compared to New York City's Central Park, Ibirapuera Park is São Paulo's center of activity and recreation. Initially built in 1954 to commemorate the city's 400th anniversary, the park includes several buildings designed by renowned architect Oscar Niemeyer. Visitors can lounge on rolling lawns and take in the panoramic view of

Party down for Pride

Our weekend picks for Boston Pride Month.

CARLY OLSON
@carlyolson28
carlyolson@metro.us

Boston Pride Month is already well underway, so you don't want to miss another beat. We turned to Sylvain Bruni, president of Boston Pride, for a rundown of this weekend's best festivities.

1 Pride Queeraoke

June 9 at 10 p.m. to 2 a.m.
Midway Café, 3496 Washington Street
"Queeraoke is a big tradition in Boston Pride," Bruni says. "People are invited to explore their artistry... not necessarily to sing well," he adds with a laugh. The tone deaf and the classically trained are both welcomed to showcase their singing chops at this late-night production, but Bruni notes that this event is always packed, and recommends going early.

Scenes from the 2015 Boston Pride Parade

2 Boston Dyke March After-Party

June 10 at 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.
Bella Luna, 284 Amory Street, Jamaica Plain
The Dyke March, which takes place around the Boston Common, warrants an after-party of its own. Bruni emphasizes that this event is still open to all: "Jamaica Plain has a large lesbian community, but men and allies are more than welcome." DJ Maryalice, an active community member and Pride supporter, will spin a mix of top 40 and hip-hop.

3 Escandalo,

June 10 at 10 p.m. to 2 a.m.
Machine Nightclub, 1254 Boylston Street
Part of the Black and Latin Pride series, Escandalo is your night to cut up the dance floor. The event centers on the theme that "no matter the color of your skin, you're more than welcome to celebrate at Pride," Bruni says. Lineysha Sparx of "RuPaul's Drag Race" will be in attendance.

4 Boston Pride After-Party

June 11 at 7 p.m.
Hard Rock Café,

22-24 Clinton Street
Bruni expects a large crowd at the Pride Parade's after party, hosted by the Hard Rock Café. "The Hard Rock Café has been working with Pride as a venue that's safe and comfortable for the LGBT community," explains Bruni. DJ Joe Bermudez will spin a celebratory dance mix for the occasion.

5 Back Bay Block Party

June 12 at 1 p.m. to 8 p.m.
St. James Avenue at Berkeley Street
Bruni sums it up simply: this is a "giant dance party." DJ Jalil Z, who hails from Miami, will headline and local DJ Andrea Stamas will spin her signature dance hits. "It's going to be a very entertaining stage," Bruni adds. Thousands turn out to this flagship party annually.

2016 Copa America: Chile and Bolivia invade Gillette Stadium

The defending champs are a heavy favorite Friday night.

RICH SLATE
@RichSlate
sports@metro.us

There should be a palpable sense of urgency from the opening whistle on Friday (7 p.m., Fox Sports 1) as Chile meets Bolivia at Gillette Stadium in Foxboro — the second match for both countries in the 2016 Copa America.

As the defending champions, Chile is expected to do well this time around but they'll need a win after dropping their opener, 2-1, to Argentina on Monday at Levi's Stadium in Santa Clara, California (a rematch of the thrilling 2015 Copa America Final that Chile won in penalty kicks). Conversely, few will pick Bolivia to get a draw or a shocking win after it fell, 2-1, to Panama on Monday in its opener.

Argentina could be the class of the tournament and its win over Chile means that the rest of Group D is likely playing for second-place (the other quarterfinal spot). The two winners — Argentina and Panama — from Monday meet later on Friday (9:30, Fox Sports 1) at Chicago's Soldier Field. Let's assume that Argentina grabs another three

Copa America ticket demand

The get-in price, according to StubHub, for Friday's match at Gillette is $20, with an average ticket price of $51. The best seats are going for just north of $500.

Peru will face Brazil on Sunday at Gillette and tickets are going for an average of $125.

The Copa America quarterfinals at Gillette, taking place on June 18, currently have an average ticket price of $133.

points there, wrapping up first-place in only two matches just like Colombia accomplished on Tuesday with its 2-1 victory against Paraguay at the Rose Bowl. For that reason, Chile absolutely has to beat Bolivia and it would help to run up the score a bit even though a minus-1 goal differential coming in isn't backbreaking by any means. Remember, the U.S. went from minus-2 after its 2-0 opening loss to Colombia to a plus-2 after its 4-0 romp of Costa Rica on Tuesday.

Chile could be in worse shape since it was about to lose to Argentina, 2-0, before midfielder Jose Fuenzalida scored for them in the 93rd minute (a healthy amount of injury time). That goal ensured that the loss to Argentina, while bitter, wasn't even more costly. With world-class players like midfielder Arturo Vidal and striker Alexis Sanchez, it's only a matter of time before Chile's powerful offense gets untracked in this tournament. It was scoreless against Argentina until the 51st minute when star midfielder Angel Di Maria scored and then teammate Ever Banega followed that up with a tally of his own just eight minutes later, leaving Chile shell-shocked.

The Panama-Bolivia match was closer as Panama's striker Blas Perez opened the scoring in the 11th minute but Bolivian striker Juan Carlos Arce tied it in the 54th minute. Perez notched his second goal in the 87th minute, a brutal time for Bolivia to give up a game-winning goal. The bad news for Bolivia is that it squandered by far its best chance to get points in this group. It's doubtful that it'll do anything against Chile or Argentina, meaning that it will have a short stay in the 2016 Copa America.

Change will occur if the Cavs fall to the Warriors in the Finals.

MATT BURKE
@burke_metro
matthew.burke@metro.us

The second the final horn sounded at Oracle Arena on Memorial Day, Kevin Durant's free agency became trending topic No. 1 in NBA circles. Talk of the actual Finals was a distant No. 2.

It's hot stove season for the fans of the 28 NBA teams that aren't playing basketball right now, and odd as it is to say — the Warriors and Cavaliers aren't really in the conversation. Yet.

If the Cavaliers do lose the series to Golden State like they look like they're going to, they will immediately become the most intriguing team around. LeBron still has that promise to fulfill to "the Land," so we'll give him the benefit of the doubt and say that he stays put. Ditto for Kyrie Irving. But Kevin Love, the third wheel of this operation, will immediately be floated in every trade scenario imaginable. LeBron and the Cavs' brass will want to find pieces that fit better in their scheme than Love, even if that means selling off the proverbial dollar for four quarters.

Two places, in particular, look like great landing spots for Love if things go south for Cleveland in the next week or so.

Celtics

Love has been rumored to the Celtics since like 2004 — and yes, for the record, I'd have given up Jiri Welsch straight up.

Danny Ainge's man crush on Love is well-known as the Celtics have held consistent interest in acquiring him. The C's made a run at Love as recently as February's trade deadline.

"If [the Cavs lose in the Finals] again, I'd bet big on Love being elsewhere — a split that might end up the best thing for everyone," ESPN's Zach Lowe wrote a few months back. "Cleveland and Boston had trade talks for Love at the deadline, though they died with Boston offering a low-ball package the Cavs wouldn't consider, according to several league sources. Even if Boston's interest has faded, someone will call Cleveland about Love around the draft. [Andrew] Wiggins has more trade value than Love now, but that deal was the right move at the time."

The Cavs may very well reconsider that "low ball" offer as they will want to make change for LeBron's ... er ... change sake. Obtaining a defensive-oriented guard like the Celtics' Marcus Smart and/or Avery Bradley would boost the Cavs'

Love hurts

Love did not play in Game 3 of the NBA Finals last night after he suffered a concussion in Game 2 this past Sunday. According to ESPN, Love tried to convince Cavs officials that he was good enough to play but the team's medical staff did not clear him.

chances of finally taking down Golden State and the Splash Bros. Remember that the Celtics nearly went 2-0 against the Warriors this past season.

Boston would obviously need to give up more, but it has the draft picks to spare. The Cavs could then flip one or more Celtics picks for even more immediate help.

Knicks

The Ringer's Jonathan Tjarks touched on a potential Carmelo Anthony for Love swap on Tuesday, and — like he said — it makes great sense for both New York and Cleveland.

"It almost makes too much sense for it not to happen," Tjarks wrote. "The 27-year-old Love embeds within Kristaps Porzingis' timetable in New York better than the 32-year-old Anthony, and it's not clear how a rebuilding Knicks team will be able to contend in the remaining years of Carmelo's prime."

Aries A trip will help you more clearly see a situation you face. A partnership can be adjusted to improve communication and cooperation. Romance will improve your day.

Taurus You cannot buy love or use emotional manipulation to get your way. Youngsters will try your patience and arguments will not solve matters. Learn from past mistakes.

Gemini If something doesn't seem right, you need to ask questions. Don't be a follower, or you will end up being used. Home and personal improvements will boost your confidence.

Cancer Don't let the unexpected changes going on around you cause stress and worry. Go about your business and follow your chosen path. Trust in your imagination and don't fear being unique.

Leo Think twice before you share your opinion. Not everyone will agree, putting you in a compromising position. Put more effort into self-preservation, health and appearance.

Virgo Refuse to let anyone force you to make a premature decision on an issue. Use your intelligence to turn any situation you face to your favor.

Libra Don't hold back. If you believe in something, speak up and share your thoughts. Your passion and deliberate actions will help bring about compelling change.

Scorpio Don't feel the need to work with just anyone. If you carefully consider with whom you want to collaborate, you will find the road to victory without delay.

Sagittarius You'll be intrigued by an offer. Before you put your trust in someone, make sure the ideas presented are sound. Traveling and making new acquaintances will do you good.

Capricorn An opportunity to make money or expand a project will need your undivided attention. Pull in people from your past to help you turn your dream into reality.

Aquarius Say little and do a lot. Being observant and objective will help you alleviate trouble. Upgrades to your home, relationships or physical appearance will lift your spirits.

Pisces Take a short trip and interact with people you can learn from. Don't let anyone treat you poorly. Speak up and take action. It's up to you to initiate personal change. EUGENIA LAST
